

POSTGRADUATE INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

Newsletter – February 2016

Welcome to the February newsletter about recent developments related to our suite of MA degrees in International Relations.

Dr. Stephen Hurt (Course Director, MA in International Relations).

MA Study Trip to Brussels and The Hague

Our current MA students recently returned from their four-day study trip to Brussels and The Hague. They visited a number of institutions including the Organisation for the Prohibition of Chemical Weapons (pictured above).

New Degree Title and Terrorism Module

We are excited to announce that the University has now signed-off on a name change to the degrees we offer. As of 2016-17 we will be offering an MA in International Relations with the option of taking the existing pathways in Global Political Economy, Environment, or Security.

Next year Dr Michael Lister (Reader in Politics) will be offering an exciting new optional module entitled 'Critical Approaches to Terrorism'. This is closely linked to the ESRC-funded research that Michael has done over recent years.

Staff News

Last month Dr Doerthe Rosenow (Senior Lecturer in International Relations) organised an interdisciplinary workshop on the topic 'Vulnerability and the Politics of Care'. This two-day event held at Oxford Brookes allowed a range of invited speakers to explore vulnerability and its ethnographic, historical, aesthetic, and political manifestations.

Semester Dates

Download full semester dates at:
<http://www.brookes.ac.uk/studying-at-brookes/learning-and-teaching/semester-dates/>

Join us on facebook

www.facebook.com/groups/brookes.pginternationalstudies

- MA International Relations
- MA International Relations (Global Political Economy)
- MA International Relations (Environment)
- MA International Relations (Security)